

Prof. Dr. Daniela Lohaus studied psychology and business administration. She worked in the chemical industry in marketing and sales, and in the IT-consulting industry in human resource management and organizational change. After ten years at the University of Applied Sciences in Stuttgart with a focus on human resource management, leadership and organisation, she has been working at the University of Applied Sciences in Darmstadt since 2014. Her field of expertise is personnel, work, and organization. As a certified systemic coach she has broad consulting experience and she is author of numerous scientific publications and books on topics relating to personnel psychology.