

Stacy Jain

Director, Strategy, Planning & Program Delivery – Kaiser Permanente

As a venture strategist, Stacy is driving investments to new joint ventures by developing specific insights, strategies and assessing high-priority opportunities to reimagine the delivery of healthcare. Her focus is the integration of innovations in medicine with A.I. and recently looking at applications of blockchain in healthcare with a big emphasis on security, medical record sharing and humanistic information economy.

Stacy's vision is to build a global army of health innovators on the blockchain, forming an ecosystem of entrepreneurs, leading researchers, mentors, investors, and companies to facilitate collaboration and easier scaling of new solutions.

With more than 20+ years in defining, shaping and evolving the delivery of patient care, she has a relentless passion to stretch and advance digital healthcare, especially in promoting mental health and wellness. She was the director of technology investment strategy, consulting and program delivery at Kaiser Permanente where she had established herself as an industry thought partner through her astounding history of executing large scale, complex systems and programs. She consistently delivered business values via her program delivery techniques along with her facilitative leadership style in building trusting partnership across multi-disciplines. Previously she was in project leadership roles with healthcare organizations such as Dignity Health and L.A. Care Health Plan.

Part of her other passion is to implement an agile transformation strategy to enable the business to quickly adapt, make investments at the right places and to improve speed to market while maintaining a productive work environment and a fun team culture.
