

Susan Winter, PhD

Dr. Susan Winter is a nationally known expert in cognitive techniques used to increase collaboration, cooperation coordination, and ultimately greater professional satisfaction. Organizations must manage conflicting stakeholders with competing objectives when making critical decisions. Decision processes may break down due to strong personalities and general lack of consensus on priorities and well-defined criteria relevant for the decision. Susan leverages decades of experience with cognitive processes and skills training to boost workplace performance, converting unproductive attitudes and belief patterns held by diverse functions in varied leadership positions into productive, solution-focused interactions. Susan earned her PhD at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine at Yeshiva University, a premier, research-intensive medical school dedicated to innovative biomedical investigation.

Susan is a nationally known expert in applying cognitive techniques to optimize stakeholder collaboration and solve complex business challenges. She helps companies to manage conflict situations arising from diverse functional styles, skills, competencies and the interplay of personalities. Susan leverages decades of experience with cognitive processes and skills training to boost workplace performance enhance competitive advantage and increase professional satisfaction.